THE LOVE TEACHER
ARTICLE OF THE MONTH
I remember a recent conversation with my son. As soon as he came home from school, he took his tablet and started searching for something. In a few minutes, I saw him making a sigh along with a 'yes, so I was right'. Perplexed, I asked what was the matter. He said, "Aah, my dumb teacher!" . I was shocked and reprimanded him for saying such words against his teacher. He apologized and said, "Amma, but she is wrong" . I then asked the details and found that the teacher had given a wrong answer for one of his query in physics. Well, my son is a little ahead of his classmates in terms of his knowledge in electronics and physics. Probably that's why he got upset on the fact that he got wrong information from his teacher. Am sure, he will then start to distrust his teacher the next time onwards. And in some cases, students like him will end up as casual listeners because they know that their teacher is not knowledgeable.

Another instance was when my daughter mentioned casually that she was doing an assignment for the sake of showing it to her teacher who will otherwise crib.

I know, most of you will have many such instances of student's perspectives of a teacher. As I grew up, I also did have several such teachers whom I hated. And ironically we start to hate a subject when we don't like the teacher who teaches the subject. I still remember, one reason why I failed in Maths during my pre-degree (plus two) was because I didn't like the teacher who taught it. I found all her classes boring to the core that I stopped learning and finally flunked in the exam. Later I took help of my own classmates who taught me the principles and then passed the exam.

The role of a teacher thus is not helping the student learn the subject but to help him/ her fall in love with the subject. For which, the student should fall in love with the teacher! Yes, every student should love his /her teacher first in order to love the subject. I may sound a bit off-track, but think deeper. you will get to know what I am trying to say. Ultimately we remember only the teacher who loved us and who cared for us specially than others.

With Google being the teacher of the new generation, I think, there is only one subject every human teacher needs to teach - Humanity. Whichever is the subject a teacher teaches, include the ingredients of love and humanity, I am sure, the student will be transformed.

Yes, become "The Love Teacher" than the mere "The Maths Teacher" or "Science Teacher".

A group of widows were identified by Kerala state Backward development corporation and were given sewing machine as a livelihood support system and trained in tailoring. As a next step, they were invited to get an entrepreneurship orientation to start garment units. This happened at the northern most district, Kasargode.

These women will be further guided on setting up the units as a cluster and also in marketing of their products.

We also discussed about the various steps towards entrepreneurship and formed small groups to enable further implementation.
Prayaana is proud to announce the revamp of our website which coincides with our expanding role in providing career support to women in all walks of life. Our new website provides a clear message of who we are, what we stand for and where our values lie when providing help to women in society.
